The announcement comes after Microsoft on Friday def eated a last-ditch effort by the US Federal Trade Commission to scuttle the 8518; company'sR$68.7 billion purchase of Activision Blizzard. The Ninth Ci rcuit Court of Appeals declined to grant the regulator an emergency stay ㈳ 8; of a ruling that allows the deal to proceed in the US. The United Kingdom 9;s Markets and Competition Authority (CMA) 😆 is the last remaining reg ulator of note opposed to the purchase, but the watchdog and Microsoft recently agreed to put 😆 their legal battle over the deal on hold and negotiate a compromise. We are pleased to announce that Microsoft and @PlayStation 😆 h ave signed a binding agreement to keep Call of Duty on PlayStation following the acquisition of Activision Blizzard. We look 😆 forward to a future wher e players globally have more choice to play their favorite games. Phil Spencer (@XboxP3) July 😆 16, 2024 "From Day One of this acquisition, we ve been committed to address ing the concerns of regulators, platform and game developers, 😆 and con sumers," Microsoft President and Vice Chair Brad Smith tweeted in response to Spencer's post. "Even after we cross the 😆 finish line for this deal s approval, we will remain focused on ensuring that Call of Duty remai ns available on more 😆 platforms and for more consumers than ever befor e." Spencer did not disclose the terms of Microsoft's deal with Sony, t hough Stephen 😆 Totilo of Axios later confirmed that it is 10 years in duration. Microsoft first offered Sony a 10-year deal to 😆 keep Call of Duty on current and future PlayStation consoles at the end of last year, though the Japanese electronics 😆 giant turned down the olive branch at the t ime. In an effort to secure approval from regulators, including the FTC 😆 ç and CMA, Microsoft went on to sign an agreement with Nintendo to bring the se ries to the company's future consoles. 😆 It also came to terms with cloud gaming providers like NVIDIA.
