The method for finding arbitrage opportunities entails looking for significantly different odds, on the same event. The bettor then places bets on the different outcomes of the event. The bettor's goal is to make a profit regardless of the outcome. This is done by finding odds that are significantly different from each other. For example, if the odds for Team A to win are 1.50 and the odds for Team B to win are 2.00, the bettor can place bets on both teams and make a profit if Team A wins.
